Museum Barberini Extends Rembrandt Show until July 18, 2021

Rembrandt's Orient, the current exhibition at the Museum Barberini, will be extended for three weeks until July 18, 2021. Ortrud Westheider, director of the Museum Barberini, explains, "We are extremely pleased that our lenders have made it possible for us to extend the running time of the exhibition. Last year we were fortunate that our partners from all over the world agreed to prolong the large Monet retrospective and to also postpone Impressionism in Russia. We are grateful for the great trust given to us by the numerous international museums and collections of the Rembrandt exhibition. Our visitors, whom we look forward to greeting in the museum again as soon as the pandemic situation allows, will now be able to experience 110 wonderful paintings well into the summer, including key works by Rembrandt, Ferdinand Bol, Jan van der Heyden, Willem Kalf, Pieter Lastman, and Jan Lievens from the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam, the Gemäldegalerie in Dresden, the Prado in Madrid, the National Gallery in London, and the Kunsthistorisches Museum in Vienna."

For all visitors who are not able to visit the exhibition in Potsdam in the coming months, the Museum Barberini offers a comprehensive digital education program with live online tours for individuals, groups, families, and schools, in both German and English. Additionally, our online program of lectures and video interviews feature specialists who focus on various aspects of the exhibition. Prolog, the multimedia website on the Rembrandt exhibition, offers a free overview of the subjects and works in Rembrandt's Orient. Furthermore, the 360-degree virtual tour enables users to explore the individual rooms of the show.
